Rudolph (Rudy) Maharaj brings a practical and business-focused approach to real estate transactions, leveraging experience across commercial and residential sectors—including leasing, land use, and redevelopment—to help clients achieve their property goals with efficiency and confidence.

Rudy handles complex real estate transactions including the acquisition, leasing, and disposition of industrial, office and retail properties. He is skilled at managing every stage of the deal process, from drafting and negotiating contracts to reviewing title, survey, and loan documentation through closing.

Clients rely on Rudy for his clear communication, proactive problem-solving, and attention to both legal and business details. He has extensive experience drafting all manner of real estate agreements and has also handled land use applications representing clients before local planning and zoning boards.

Before joining Porzio, Rudy worked with a financial services firm, engaging institutional investors and gaining valuable perspective on how legal support can align with investor priorities and decision-making. He draws on this unique combination of legal and business experience to deliver practical, strategic guidance tailored to each client's unique needs.
