Hannah Nagy's background in tax law, combined with her experience in both legal and financial matters, shapes her multidisciplinary perspective to her practice. She draws on this perspective to help clients navigate complex legal and financial considerations.

Prior to joining Porzio, Hannah worked in the International Tax Services group at PricewaterhouseCoopers, where she advised on the domestic and international tax implications of mergers, acquisitions, and cross-border transactions. Her experience includes evaluating transaction structures, analyzing tax treaty considerations, and navigating evolving global tax regulations.

Hannah earned her LL.M. in Taxation from New York University School of Law, further strengthening her foundation in tax law and its application to complex legal and financial matters. During law school at Seton Hall University School of Law, she served as Student Director of the Appellate Advocacy Program and as a Senior Editor of the Seton Hall Journal of Legislation and Public Policy. She also served as a judicial intern to the Honorable Esther Salas of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.
